Not illustrated. 1850 Excerpt: . . . thy care, O shield her from the blast--her tender form Hath sufferd much in miserys wasting storm; Pale want, or cruel insult long hath been, Our fireside guest, or partner on the green, And two days since we lost our little all, By legal plunderers driven from house and hall. Thus far I wanderd, here I hid my head--For without money who would give me bread Nor yet could bread, nor friends, nor human art, Eer cure this broken, doubly broken heart. She added not, for on her faltering tongue, Half-formd the words at once suspended hung; Her eyes on trembling Damon fearful roll, And in a groan escapd her weary soul. Her babe soon followd--in one grave they lie; And Damon, though he lives, lives but to sigh. Even life he hates, society he shuns, But, where the brook beneath yon copse-wood runs, There you may see him sit a summer day, Lamenting her, untimely taen away; Or, in the shelter of yon echoing cave, What time the winds of winter rudely rave, Or by the margin of the yelling flood, With maniac step he roams in mournful mood: And oft, by wild imagination led, Among the tombs he makes his clay cold bed, Where, wakeful, on the midnight wind he flings The saddest notes that sleep on Fancys strings; And though no method guide his wandering song, Yet still it speaks of violence and wrong--Of tyranny triumphant--virtue laid To weep in secret, far from...
