God grant that no such awful and awakening providence, as the removal of a young person, so lately full of life, and health, and strength, should pass without some serious improvement; some earnest desire to have my loins girt, and my lamp burning. October 6th. My sister Pinekney died, having been generally delirious from Friday; and her speech so thickened, that though she attempted it in the intervals of reason, she never could make us understand what she wished to say to us. Miss Futerell and myself were constantly with her; but my heart is too full to write on this subject. Lord, .iiou know est my groanings, and my sighings are not hid from thee; commiserate thy poor, sinful, suffering creature; and fill me with humility and resignation, under this exceedingly heavy stroke of thy Providence. 13th. Having had continued sickness of body, and a mind full of grief; though I trust entirely submitted, and resigned to the divine will, and desiring to find life, health, and peace in the cross, on the second of November, I became so seriously ill, as to fill all about me with apprehensions for my life; in which state, I remained for two days; and for five more, in a state of very deplorable weakness; it pleased Him, however, in whose hands are the issues of life and death, to raise me from the bed of languishing; and upon the whole, my general health is better...
