Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Some Old Historic Landmarks: Of Virginia and Maryland, Described in a Hand-Book for the Tourist Over the Washington-Virginia Railway The tourist who boards the train of the Washington, Alexandria and Mount Vernon Electric Railway at the corner of Thirteen and a half street and Pennsylvania Avenue in the National Capital, for a ride to the Home and Tomb of George Washington will pass through a region of country whose every locality bears the vivid impress of most interesting as well as important historical associations, reaching back through nearly three hundred years of the beginnings and progress of our country in the march of civilization and advancement. On every stream and thoroughfare, in every valley and on every hill crest there is some memento or land mark, in whatever direction the eye may range to remind of the pioneers who transformed the wastes of the wilderness, marked the bounds of the homesteads, laid the hearth stones, established the neighborhoods and set up the altars of the Virginia Commonwealth. Aside from the great historic interest which pertains to every portion of the way of this desirable route to Mount Vernon, there is also for the tourist a pleasing diversity of natural scenery, of which the broad skirting river forms a very attractive part. As the train passes down 14th street towards the Potomac, the beautifully diversified grounds of the Agricultural Department, those of the Smithsonian Institute and of the National Museum and the Botanical Gardens, comprising a large area reaching to the foot of the Capitol may be seen on the left. The extensive and varied collections in the spacious buildings of these grounds from all lands...
