How to Write Lyrical Limericks and Poems That Pay Has anyone ever made verse pay during their lifetime Yes. Robert William Service The Poet of the Yukon. I may be the only living writer to have made more than 1, 000, 000 out of writing verse. That quote is from the ScotsCanadian writer of The Shooting of Dan McGrew and many other stirring verses. His was the poetry of the people and they bought it in droves. If your main ambition as a verse writer is to make money (rather than seeking literary fame) take a leaf from Roberts book learn to write for regular folk. Words and rhythms that stir emotion, subjects that tug at the heart strings make em laugh, make em cry you are an entertainer. . . a weaver of magic moments. . . a writer to be remembered, recited and quoted. It is my hope that some readers of this book will one day be able to make the above claim for yourself. Whatever your outcome, you will have a lot of fun trying. The pleasure...
