Reviews

Absolutely among the best publication I have got at any time go through. It really is writter in straightforward phrases rather than hard to understand. Its been designed in an extremely straightforward way which is just soon after i finished reading this publication through which basically modified me, alter the way i believe.

Sensitive Skin Magazine. Paperback. Book Condition: New. Paperback. 238 pages. Dimensions: 8.9in. x 6.0in. x 0.8in. Amongst the oil fumes and the briny dinge of the sea, greasy, tired, frustrated, I had a flash. Suddenly, I had it all figured out the psychology of despots and CEOs. I figured that in order for civilization to exist, people have to stay in one place, and so it seems somehow natural that the evolution of society would be to create an illusion of motion where none exists. Faster cars. Faster editing. Increased sensory stimulation. But all the while we are actually sitting more and more still. The population is placated by the feeling of progress, when in reality they are imprisoned. Even if we feel or strive to be utterly irresponsible, we're still somehow doing our job. Carl Watson evokes his desolation angels with great empathy and care, but also with ruthless candor. He writes like someone who pushed himself to the wall, then pushed through it to the void and came back with stories to tell. Here he reclaims the Seventies, one of the more desolate of recent epochs, with the clarity of Proust, the balefulness of Bodenheimer, and the raw honesty of an Iggy song. John Strausbaugh, author of Black Like You and Sissy Nation CW writes like he put his thumb in the air on some two-lane American highway that used to be an Indian Trail, where he got picked up by God. Like he has come back to the fire in the woods we have gathered around at the end of the world with our loved ones to tell us what he saw. Andrew Huebner, author of We Pierce, American By Blood and East of Bowery With prose unfurling like cigarette smoke bleeding into that cloud of half-forgotten memories forever shadowing missed...
